1 X 60'
human interest
documentary

LICK SALT is a personal film about heritage, separation and survival that celebrates the mishigas! (craziness) of life.

After 15 years of estrangement, Ryan Feldman is re-acquainted with his lonely grandmother, Cecile, at his grandfather's funeral. Over the next three years, Cecile's struggles with Alzheimer's and Dementia unfold. Caught between reality and delusions, she is never pitiable, still capable of affection and vanity, and living independently.

During this time Ryan and Cecile's relationship takes on many forms. They are strangers, friends, teacher and pupil, an improvisational comedy duo, partners in crime, and kindred spirits. In this deeply intimate tale, humor is their only saving grace.
