sports/biography
documentary

Woman Driver is the poignant and inspiring true story of Katherine Legge and her remarkable journey through the highly competitive world of racing.

Some say she doesn't belong on the racetrack. Year after year, she has to prove that she has the grit, the stamina, the physical strength, and the wherewithal to not only race, but to meet all the demands of a career as a race car driver.

Who is this young superstar, who came seemingly out of nowhere to capture the hearts and minds of open wheel racing fans?

This story recounts Katherine's early years from racing go-karts in her childhood, advancing through the amateur ranks to the professional level. And then the real challenges began.

From the constant need for money and high-profile sponsorships to the brutal physical demands of the sport, professional racing is an elusive career for even the most wealthy and talented drivers on the planet. No less for a middle class girl from England.

The story culminates in the most exciting ride of Katherine's life - her debut in the 2006 Champ Car World Series of Racing.

This film is the first in depth look at Katherine Legge. Told in her own words along with commentary from those who have witnessed the transformation from her humble beginnings to her meteoric rise in the male-dominated world of motorsports.

With passion and an iron will to succeed balanced with charm and humility, Katherine Legge is poised to become a racing legend - setting records and breaking down barriers.
